What is the migrant settlement service?

Australia is one of the most diverse populations in the world. In order for migration to be successful in both policy and practice, the Community Migrant Service helps migrants not only with adjusting to Australian life but to become vital and active members in the community. The service aims to promote economic and personal wellbeing, self-determination, independence, and community connectedness.

The Community Migrant Service is located in Karratha and South Hedland and facilitates pathways to learning English, education and employment readiness. Service coordination and delivery include, but are not limited to, group information sessions teaching life skills and providing information on different issues such as the health system, employment, police and the law and banking practices. The service is also delivered to the Goldfields Community Legal Centre.

What do our migrant settlement workers do?

The migrant settlement service provides one on one casework, support, information and linkages to other mainstream services to assist migrants.

Community development activities include the implementation of projects that aim to support and empower newly emerging community groups. Face to face, individual and group assistance is available to newly arrived migrants.
